Russian Charged in Poisoning

U.K. accuses former KGB bodyguard of murdering ex-spy

LONDON | Britain made a bold extradition request Tuesday for a former KGB bodyguard in the poisoning death of an ex-Soviet spy turned Kremlin critic. Russia immediately refused the request, creating a standoff with Europe's leading energy supplier and threatening to plunge relations to a post-Cold War low.

British prosecutors say they have enough evidence to charge Andrei Lugovoi with the murder of former KGB agent Alexander Litvinenko. Lugovoi met with Litvinenko at a London hotel the day his tea was poisoned with polonium-210, a radioactive substance.

Lugovoi, a former KGB bodyguard, denied involvement Tuesday, saying the charges were politically motivated.

The Russian ambassador was summoned to the Foreign Office, and Prime Minister Tony Blair's office said it expected full cooperation. "Murder is murder; this is a very serious case," Blair's spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity in line with government policy. "The manner of the murder was also very serious because of the risks to public health."

On his deathbed, the 43-year-old Litvinenko accused Russian President Vladimir Putin of being behind his killing. The Russian government has denied any involvement in Litvinenko's death.

'I Want to Wake Up Like I Want a Hole in the Head'

Michael Lusher is a sound sleeper. A small-caliber bullet struck the 37-year-old Altizer, W.Va., man in the head as he slept Sunday morning, but he didn't realize it until he awoke nearly four hours later and noticed blood coming from his head, said Cpl. R.H. McQuaid. The bullet that struck him was one of five that someone sprayed across his mobile home at about 4:20 a.m. Sunday. The one that struck Lusher apparently lost velocity as it traveled through two walls. Lusher came home from a night on the town about an hour before he was shot while lying in bed, McQuaid said. ## Teens Craft Cunning Plan to Get Caught

Two teens are in hot water after they returned to a pool at the same hotel where they had robbed three people about 15 hours earlier. Two women and a man were held up at gunpoint at about 2 a.m. Saturday on the beach by Shorewood Villas on Hilton Head Island, S.C., Sheriff's Capt. Toby McSwain said. The teens took purses, wallets and cash before one of them pistol-whipped the man. The victims then saw the same two men at their hotel later on Saturday. "They were basically just hanging out at the pool," McSwain said. (AP)

His Nose Knows Absolutely Nothing

A federal law enforcement officer is suing the makers of cold remedy Zicam because he lost his sense of smell and can no longer detect methamphetamine labs, a Charleston, W.Va., newspaper reported. Deputy U.S. Marshal William Seckman says he no longer can identify the meth lab odor, similar to rotten eggs

Sweet Incentive

Christina Lang's fifth-grade students at Sugar Mill Elementary School in Port Orange, Fla., don't need incentives like a bright future or a lucrative job to pass their Comprehensive Assessment Test. If they get the highest score — a 5 — they get to throw a pie in Lang's face. This year's scores haven't been released yet, so Lang let each pupil throw a pie at her. She wisely donned goggles first. ## Legislators Back Work Provision

Senators vote to keep temporary work visas in immigration bill

WASHINGTON | The Senate turned back an early attack on the broad immigration overhaul Tuesday, keeping alive a temporary worker provision that could bring in as many as 600,000 foreign laborers each year.

Dorgan

Senators voted 64-31 to reject a proposal offered by Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., and supported by some labor unions to delete the program.

The vote was the first big test for the improbable coalition that wrote the measure and is struggling to keep the fragile deal from unraveling under pressure from across the political spectrum.

The bill still faces myriad assaults, including further Democratic attempts to limit or alter the temporary worker program, which would bring in foreign employees on two-year visas.

The bill would also toughen border security and create a new workplace verification system to bar undocumented workers from getting jobs. (AP)

Iraq Bill May Be Finished This Week

Democrats abandon troop timetables as part of compromise

WASHINGTON | Flinching in the face of a veto threat, Democratic congressional leaders neared agreement Tuesday on legislation to pay for the Iraq war without setting a timeline for troop withdrawal.

Several officials said the emerging compromise bill would cost about $120 billion, including as much as $8 billion, originally resisted by the White House, for Democratic domestic priorities such as disaster relief for Hurricane Katrina victims.

After a bruising veto struggle over war funding, congressional leaders in both political parties said they hoped the compromise would be cleared for President Bush's signature by Friday.

Despite the concession, Demo-

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., discusses the Iraq war funding bill Tuesday on Capitol Hill. The bill could reach President Bush as early as Friday.

cratic Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid told reporters that the legislation would be the first war-funding bill sent to Bush since the U.S.

invasion of Iraq "where he won't get a blank check."

Reid and other Democrats pointed to a provision that would set standards for the Iraqi government in developing a more democratic society. U.S. reconstruction aid would be conditioned on progress toward meeting the goals, but Bush would have authority to order the money to be spent regardless of how the government in Baghdad performed.

Republicans said that after weeks of struggle, they had forced Democrats to give up their demand for a date to withdraw the troops.

"I'm optimistic that we will achieve the following: a full four-month funding bill without surrender dates. I think there's a good chance of that," said Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky.

Officials said the final details of the measure remained in flux. They spoke on condition of anonymity, saying that Democratic House Speaker Nancy Pelosi intended to present the proposal to her rank and file at an evening meeting. (AP)

Period-Halting Birth Control Pill OK'd

Lybrel is first approved contraceptive meant to stop menstruation

WASHINGTON | The first birth-control pill meant to put a stop to women's monthly periods indefinitely has won federal approval, the manufacturer said Tuesday.

Called Lybrel, it's the first such

WYETHPHARMACEUTICALS

The birth control pill Lybrel contains a low dose of two widely used hormones.

pill to receive Food and Drug Administration approval for continuous use. When taken daily, the pill can halt women's menstrual periods indefinitely and prevent pregnancies.

It's the latest approved oral contraceptive to depart from the 21-days-on, seven-days-off regimen that had been standard since birth-control pill sales began in the 1960s. The Wyeth pill is the first designed to put off periods altogether when taken without break.

Most of the roughly 12 million U.S. women who take birth-control pills do so to prevent pregnancy. Others rely on hormonal contraceptives to curb acne or regulate their monthly periods.

Wyeth plans to start Lybrel sales in July. The pill contains a low dose of two hormones already widely used in birth-control pills, ethinyl estradiol and levonorgestrel. (AP)

Fourscore and Smallpox?

Doctors say Lincoln may have had disease during famous address

CHICAGO | Abraham Lincoln has been dead for 142 years, but he still manages to make medical headlines — this time from doctors who say he had a bad case of smallpox when he delivered the Gettysburg Address.

"If you play doctor, it's difficult to shut down the diagnostic process" when reading about historical figures, said Dr. Armond Goldman, an immunology specialist and professor emeritus at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston. He and a colleague "diagnosed" serious smallpox in Lincoln after scouring historical documents, biographies and old newspaper clippings.

Their report appears in May's Journal of Medical Biography.

Heart illness, eye problems and depression are among other ailments modern-day doctors have investigated in the 16th president.

Physicians say Abraham Lincoln may have had smallpox while at Gettysburg.

But smallpox is the one that might come as the biggest surprise to the general public, especially if Lincoln had it when he spoke at Gettysburg.

According to Goldman and co-author Dr. Frank Schmalstieg, Lincoln fell ill Nov. 18, the day before giving the speech in Pennsylvania.

When Lincoln arrived at the battlefield to dedicate a cemetery for the fallen soldiers, he was weak and dizzy, and his face "had a ghastly color," according to the report.

On the train back to Washington that evening, Lincoln was feverish and had severe headaches. Then he developed back pains, exhaustion and a widespread scarlet rash that turned blister-like. A servant who tended to Lincoln during the three-week illness later developed smallpox and died in January 1864.

Rodney Davis, a Lincoln historian at Illinois' Knox College, said people who don't read Lincoln biographies may not know about his smallpox, but "it's not anything that's ever been suppressed. It's just never been all that significant, given the highlights of his career." (AP)

Thousands Attend Falwell's Funeral

Reverend's followers champion his work in the political arena

LYNCHBURG, VA. | The Rev. Jerry Falwell was remembered by thousands Tuesday as a champion of conservative Christian values who fearlessly galvanized the religious right into a force in American politics.

The funeral returned Falwell to his roots — the Thomas Road Baptist Church, where he started as a young preacher in 1956 with just 35 parishioners. More than 10,000 people attended the funeral, many forced into overflow seating.

"He was a champion of the fundamental values that we hold dear," fellow Virginia evangelist Pat Robertson said as he entered the sanctuary. "He stepped on some toes."

Pallbearers carry the casket of the Rev. Jerry Falwell out of Thomas Road Baptist Church and place it in a hearse following his funeral on Tuesday in Lynchburg, Va.

Falwell, 73, died a week ago after collapsing in his office at the university.

Speakers remembered Falwell the politician, who became a force in the Republican Party in the 1980s after starting the Moral Majority and organizing the conservative Christian vote to send Ronald Reagan to the White House.

"He said, 'I believe God has called me to confront the culture,' and did he ever confront it," said the Rev. Jerry Vines, former president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

More than 33,000 people viewed Falwell's body over four days as it lay in repose.

A private burial was planned on the grounds of Liberty University near the former mansion where Falwell's office was located. (AP)

WASHINGTON | The House passed legislation Tuesday to combat the criminal use of Internet spyware.

The bill makes it a criminal offense, subject to a prison term of up to five years, to access a computer without authorization to further another federal criminal offense.

Spyware is software that secretly collects information about a person or organization and sends it to another entity without the user's consent.

Similar bills have been approved by the House in past sessions of Congress but have yet to clear the Senate. (AP)

JERUSALEM Defense Official Threatens To Target Hamas Leaders

Israel's Deputy Defense Minister Ephraim Sneh threatened Tuesday to target Hamas political leaders, calling them "terrorists in suits" after a rocket attack by the Islamic militant group killed an Israeli woman. Subsequent Israel airstrikes targeted two suspected arms caches and two Hamas bases. An Israeli helicopter also strafed a rocket launch site near Beit Hanoun. (AP)

Refugees Escape Lebanon Camp

Lull in fighting among soldiers and militants allows civilians to flee

TRIPOLI, LEBANON | People flooded out of a besieged Palestinian refugee camp Tuesday night, waving white flags and telling of bodies lying in the streets and inside wrecked houses after three days of fighting between Lebanese troops and Islamic militants.

Earlier in the day, a relief convoy came under fire when a cease-fire abruptly shattered as U.N. workers tried to deliver food and water to residents. A U.N. official said some who approached the convoy seeking supplies were wounded or killed, but he did not have exact figures.

The nighttime lull that allowed the escape did not appear to be part of an organized truce — and there was no sign the battle was over.

EXIT ROUTE: Residents flee the Palestinian refugee camp in the northern city of Tripoli, Lebanon, Tuesday. Fighting between troops and militants began Sunday.

The government of Prime Minister Fuad Saniora said it was determined to uproot Fatah Islam, which took up residence in the camp late last year.

There was no immediate indication of whether the flight of civilians would give the government a freer hand in bombarding militants holed up in the camp. The army has said its troops were trying to target only militant positions.

Twenty-nine soldiers and at least 20 militants had been killed since the battle began Sunday in the heaviest internal fighting in Lebanon since the 1975-90 civil war. But the number of civilian casualties remained unknown.

"The smell of corpses was everywhere. There was no food, water or electricity, and they were shooting at us," Dania Mahmoud Kassem, a 21-year-old student, said of the past three days in the camp. (AP)

Fears Emerge on Tainted Toothpaste

China is in hot seat over chemical used in dental care products

SHANGHAI, CHINA | It's becoming a familiar scenario: Overseas authorities warn of tainted Chinese products while Chinese producers deny any health fears and say that in any case, they're not subject to regulation.

Tainted pet food ingredients from China recently sparked recalls in the U.S.

For the second time in weeks, a Chinese drug or food product has been singled out as a threat overseas. On Monday, authorities in the Dominican Republic said they had removed 10,000 tubes of the Chinese toothpaste brands "Excel" and "Mr. Cool" from shelves after learning they contained diethylene glycol, a chemical commonly used in antifreeze and brake fluid.

Chinese authorities on Tuesday were inspecting a company called Danyang Chengshi Household Chemical Co. that exported the toothpaste, said Chen Yaozu, general manager of the firm.

Wariness of diethylene glycol is especially high because it was blamed for the deaths of at least 51 people in Panama last year after it was mixed into cough syrup.

However, Chen said the chemical, a thickening agent often used as a low-cost substitute for glycerin, was permitted under Chinese rules and was safe in small amounts. (AP)

Attack on Baghdad Market Kills 25

Car bomb strike may signal a new wave of sectarian violence

BAGHDAD | A car bomb exploded Tuesday at an outdoor market in a Shiite area of Baghdad, killing 25 people and wounding at least 60 — the deadliest in a string of attacks that stoked sectarian tension in and around the capital.

The blast occurred in Amil, one of a cluster of neighborhoods in southwestern Baghdad where Sunni-Shiite tension is running high three months after the start of the U.S.-led security crackdown.

Following the blast, terrified survivors ran through the streets hauling buckets and pots of water to try to put out fires in shops that were shattered by the bomb. Volunteers tore through the rubble, searching for survivors.

Sami Hussein, 25, was heading to the market with her 5-year-old son when she heard the explosion, "followed by gray and black smoke, which engulfed the market and made me to fall on the ground." She suffered shrapnel wounds.

"I lost my son, and have no idea about his fate," she said. Medical officials at the hospital said he died in the blast.

No group claimed responsibility for the blast. But U.S. officials believe Sunni extremists are stepping up car bombings, especially against Shiite civilians, to inflame sectarian hatred and undermine public confidence in government security forces.

There were other signs Tuesday that Sunni-Shiite tensions are again rising after they eased last winter following the start of the Baghdad security operation Feb. 14.

In north Baghdad, gunmen wearing army uniforms stopped a bus carrying college students to a Shiite neighborhood, entered the vehicle and sprayed the passengers with gunfire, police said. Eight students were killed and two were wounded.

At another fake checkpoint near Baqouba, gunmen killed six people from one family — a woman, her 5-year-old son and four men — and stole their car, police said. It was unclear whether the victims were Sunnis or Shiites.

In all, at least 100 Iraqis were killed or found dead nationwide Tuesday, according to police.

6 Killed After Bomb Explodes In Turkish Capital

ANKARA, TURKEY | A bomb exploded Tuesday in one of the Turkish capital's busiest commercial centers, killing six people and injuring about 80, authorities said.

The blast outside one of the oldest shopping malls in Ankara hurled glass and other debris over a wide area. A body, covered in a white sheet, lay outside the building.

Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan said four Turks and one Pakistani were killed in the blast. Police said an injured person died later in a hospital, raising the death toll to six.

Health Minister Recep Akdag said around 80 people were injured, most of them only slightly.

Private NTV television, quoting police sources, said the bomb was made of plastic explosives, the type favored by separatist Kurdish rebels. Militant leftists and Islamic extremists also operate in Turkey.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility. (AP)

Iran Raises Prices at Pump 25%

Gas hike likely to rile consumers grappling
with elevated inflation

TEHRAN, IRAN | Iran increased gasoline prices 25 percent Tuesday in a new blow to consumers already disgruntled over high inflation, and the government said it will begin rationing fuel in two weeks.

The moves are sure to increase public dissatisfaction with hard-line President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, whose oil-rich nation faces the same quandary as the U.S. and its rising prices at the pump: A lack of refinery capacity forces it to buy gasoline on the world market.

Discontent has been growing in Iran in recent months over soaring prices. The cost of housing has doubled, and prices for basic goods have tripled since last summer.

Portraying himself as a champion of the poor, Ahmadinejad was swept to power in 2005, promising to spread oil revenues to every family and tackle unemployment.

The increase is part of the government's efforts to reduce state subsidies on gasoline and to discourage smugglers who have been buying fuel at Iran's relatively low price and sneaking it out of the country to sell elsewhere. (AP)

Frank Sanya's secret to selling real estate lightning fast:

While many real estate professionals are sitting with a pile of unsold listings, Frank Sanya's sellers are quite regularly showing up at closings. What's the secret? How is Frank Sanya able to get action - and in fact, actually guarantee he'll sell your home within 120 days? The only way to get Frank to share the secret is to check him out on the Web at www.IWantItSoldToday.com. But don't waste your time and his unless you're serious about selling, fast!

...Rev. Ives Roberts

"A co-worker of mine gave me Frank's ad from the Express. I interviewed Frank, and 4 other agents, and Frank had more tools combined to sell my home than the other agents I spoke with. Frank had my house SOLD in 21 days for 98.7% of the asking price. I just don't understand why people don't call Frank in this kind of market."

...Ann Briggs

"A job transfer to San Francisco with no relocation package offered and needing to be out there on the new job in 30 days left me with the burden of getting my house sold, packed, and family moved. I ordered Frank's "Special Report", interviewed him, and hired him right on the spot. Frank had my house listed and SOLD in 17 days for 99.1% of the asking price. If you're contemplating selling your house in a market like this, you'd have to be crazy not to interview Frank."

...Lou Sarto

"When the time came to sell my mother's house and my childhood home along with circumstances requiring a 45-day sale, I had received 3 "Just Sold" postcards over the past 3 months where Frank Sanya was the listing and selling broker in my mother's subdivision. After interviewing Frank and 3 other real estate agents, I chose Frank for his in-depth knowledge and aggressive marketing skills. Frank had my house listed on April 17, 2007 and an ALL CASH contract on April 19, 2007 for 97% of the asking price. Frank made this such a stress-free transaction."

...Dottie VanRoekel

"Our friends told us it didn't matter who we chose to sell our home with because it would probably take a long time to sell at a price much below our asking price. Obviously, they were wrong! One week after listing with Frank, we received an offer for 98.2% of the asking price. We remember when we listed our home with Frank, he said, 'start packing'. We didn't realize he meant right away! Thanks for all your efforts and best of luck." ...Mr. and Mrs. Edwards

Md. Senators Seek $1.5B for Metro

Advocates say system deserves government help for revitalization

WASHINGTON | Maryland's U.S. senators introduced legislation Tuesday that would provide $1.5 billion over 10 years to rehabilitate the Metro transit system's aging infrastructure.

The bill introduced by Sens. Benjamin Cardin and Barbara Mikulski requires that Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia match the money over the next decade.

Virginia and the District have already approved the funding. Maryland lawmakers have not acted, though Gov. Martin O'Malley contends the state's transportation trust fund already is a dedicated source of revenue for Metro.

Metro's infrastructure is aging while ridership is growing as commuters seek to avoid worsening highway congestion.

More than 40 percent of Metro's

Cardin

rush-hour riders are federal government employees, and advocates say lawmakers should recognize the role Metro plays in keeping the government working.

"The government needs the Metro to get workers to their jobs, and now after 30 years of use, the Metro needs the federal government to step in and help revitalize an aging system," Cardin said in a statement.

The legislation, co-sponsored by Sens. John Warner and Jim Webb of Virginia, also creates an inspector general for Metro and adds two voting members to Metro's board to represent the interests of the federal government. (AP)

NAACP's D.C. Move Is Delayed

BALTIMORE | The NAACP's planned move to Washington is on hold, an official with the civil rights group said.

"I wouldn't say the deal fell through — it's been slightly delayed," NAACP Board Chairman Julian Bond said.

In December, the District of Columbia Council voted to provide $3.5 million in grants to help the civil rights group move to Anacostia Gateway, a 63,000-square-foot office complex on the banks of the Anacostia River.

Bond said the civil rights group's finances are sound, but fundraising was difficult last year. NAACP President Bruce S. Gordon resigned abruptly in March, prompting an upheaval as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was raising money for the move. (AP)

Ex-Cons Plead Guilty to D.C. Murder

WASHINGTON | Two ex-convicts have pleaded guilty to robbing and killing an aspiring British politician last summer in Georgetown.

Christopher Piper, 26, and Jeffrey Rice, 23, pleaded guilty Monday to second-degree murder and robbery charges in the killing of Alan Senitt, whose throat was slashed July 9 in front of a mansion in the affluent neighborhood. Piper also pleaded guilty to a sex abuse charge, and Rice pleaded guilty to gun charges stemming from the incident.

They each face up to 100 years in prison in the killing and are scheduled for sentencing Aug. 24 in District of Columbia Superior Court. (AP)

With high gasoline prices drawing so much attention lately, the often harsher overall cost of auto financing is being ignored by consumers who are stretching loans on new cars to as long as nine years.

Low monthly payments and no-money-down deals have long been used to shore up car sales in a slumping market. But auto buyers who opt for longer loan terms are more likely to wind up owing more on their car loans than their cars are worth.

Last year, about 29 percent of car buyers who traded in a vehicle to buy a new one owed more on their car loans than their cars were worth, compared with 20 percent five years earlier.

DAVID ZALUBOWSKI/AP

Consumers are often tuning out the harsher overall costs of auto financing.

The problem has become more vexing as consumers increasingly view life's expenses, from mobile phone and cable television bills to car payments and mortgages, in terms of monthly payments rather than total cost. Researchers say few car buyers, for example, know the actual full cost of their vehicles or stop to consider how much more expensive it is to take on a longer-term loan.

Extending the average car loan to five years from three years costs the buyer more than $2,000 in interest, yet loan terms continue to grow. Average maturity of a car loan today is about 70 months, up from 62 last year. Driving the average higher are loans that stretch to seven, eight and even nine years.

The trend reflects the development of consumer habits in a wide range of financial practices, from credit- and debit-card use to home buying and investing. People are increasingly likely to buy goods and services even when they can't comfortably afford them.

"It's the way people in the middle class live their lives," says Julie Midkiff, a production director in Atlanta who just bought a Honda CR-V using a five-year loan. "I hate the idea of having a loan for that long, but that's what it took to fit my monthly budget."

XM Restores Service After Outage

WASHINGTON | XM Satellite Radio restored service Tuesday after a software glitch knocked out the signal from one of its four satellites and disrupted service to many of the company's 8 million subscribers for about a day.

The problems began around noon Monday, the company said. They initially expected to fix the problem after a few hours but service remained disrupted for about 24 hours.

"The problem occurred during the loading of software to a critical component of our satellite broadcast system, which resulted in a loss of signal from one of our satellites," the company said on its Web site.

XM has four satellites built by Boeing Co. and launched between 2001 and 2006. The first two experienced significant problems and are now regarded as "in-orbit spares," according to the company's annual report. (AP)

Travel

TREADING ON: A surprise snowstorm on the slopes of the Matterhorn makes life difficult for hiker Sheila Norman-Culp, who unwisely is wearing capris and sneakers.

Really High Anxiety

The thrills — and chills — of hiking on the Matterhorn

UP THE MOUNTAIN | One sheer drop-off to the right, another eight feet to the left. A switchback ridge so steep that three steps brings you to the next turn. Rope handholds to clutch when the mountain trail shrinks to less than a foot wide.

What am I, a goat?

A summer day hike, my husband said. A glorious saunter up a flower-filled meadow to one of the world's most famous Alpine huts. Look, families with little children are in the gondola line with us.

Don't forget your sunglasses, it's so bright. Which is how, three hours later, I was shivering in a surprise July snowstorm en route to Hoernlihuette, the Matterhorn base camp, wearing capris and sneakers with no tread.

At 14,690 feet, the Matterhorn is not even the highest mountain in Switzerland — but it surely is the most photogenic, rising up on four elegant faces to a craggy peak along the Swiss-Italian border. Walt Disney even borrowed its silhouette for Disneyland, debuting the Matterhorn Bobsleds ride in 1959.

At the real mountain's base lies the car-free Swiss town of Zermatt. There is no offseason here; it's nearly always packed with tourists riding trains and gondolas up the mountains, hiking on the alpine trails, walking along picturesque streets lined with traditional chalets, and eating at restaurants decorated with the ubiquitous, huge Swiss cowbells.

About 4,000 people a year stay here during its brief summer season (July 1 to Sept. 30), with 3,000 of them seeking glory on top of the Matterhorn. But I was of the lesser beings, daytrippers who gasp for breath up to the stone refuge, throw themselves exhausted upon its sturdy wooden benches and need a beer — or maybe two — before they can face the trials of going back down.

We set off for Hoernlihuette on a crisp sunny morning, after a brief walk around Zermatt and a stop to pick up water and munchies. Then we were off to the Schwarzsee cable car, which whisked us 3,000 feet up to a restaurant and pond above the tree line, where families with children picnicked.

For hikers, it was time to get started, at 8,474 feet.

After 45 minutes across a stony meadow, we reached Hirli, a lone building a few hundred feet up. My, how time flies on a mountain.

Then the wind turned brisk, the blue sky ashen gray. Temperatures fell about 20 degrees. We broke out the windbreakers, which held off the freezing rain for five to six minutes tops. I longed for gloves and a hat.

The snowstorm struck when we were totally exposed on the switchback ridge. By then I was hyperventilating about the sheer cliffs on either side. I decided it was better to stare at the wet stones beneath my feet.

Ironic, is it not, that we seek out these sweeping mountain vistas, yet when we are there, a glance in any direction sends our hearts racing in fear?

Yet the mind is a marvelous thing. Since the storm limited visibility to six feet, all of a sudden I could not see the plunging cliffs. Death might be a step or two away, but I was oblivious. That's when the fear disappeared.

ROAD TEST | "Know then thyself, presume not God to scan; The proper study of mankind is Man." — Alexander Pope.

Want to know thyself better? Gauge your reaction to this car, the Smart Fortwo, a four-wheeled flea to be imported to the United States in the first quarter of 2008.

The Fortwo soon will be, by an astonishing margin, the smallest gas-powered car on the market: nearly 40 inches shorter than the BMW Mini.

This is car design as seen through the wrong end of the telescope.

Cute? It couldn't be any cuter if it were buried up to its neck in kittens. Attention-grabbing? Ice cream trucks playing "La Bamba" at 100 decibels don't get more notice. Likable? It's irresistible. The Smart is a rolling sight gag, like a fat man wearing a tiny bowler hat, or a Speedo.

Safe? Can we go back to "likable"? The first question potential buyers must consider is a cosmic version of: Do I feel lucky?

The trouble lies not so much in the car but with the American driving environment that, unlike Europe's, is filled with 3-ton trucks and SUVs, for which the Fortwo is no more than a snack.

If you're brave enough, the Smart Fortwo is the car for you. Just don't get hit.

The Pass Heard 'Round the World

James gets criticism, praise for dishing with the game on the line

NBA PLAYOFFS | The Pass has taken on a life of its own.

LeBron James' split-second decision to give up the ball in the final seconds of Game 1 — instead of shooting — has become the latest heartbreak in this city's gloomy sports history.

James was again under scrutiny Tuesday for his unselfish play — a strong pass from under the basket to Donyell Marshall, who missed a wide-open 3-pointer from the corner with 5.9 seconds left. The play sealed Cleveland's fate in a 79-76 loss to the Detroit Pistons in the Eastern Conference final opener.

After watching replays, Cavaliers coach Mike Brown concluded James did the right thing — setting up Marshall in his favorite spot with plenty of time to set his feet and get off a quality shot.

"Donyell could have had a cup of coffee — and a sandwich," Brown said.

James, who didn't attempt a single free throw in 45 minutes, was chided by some critics who believe a superstar should never pass up the big shot. Kobe Bryant certainly wouldn't have, and Michael Jordan did only when out of options.

The Pistons swarmed LeBron James all night, and he finished with just 10 points.

"I've got a problem with the best player on the floor not taking any of these shots down the stretch," TNT analyst Charles Barkley said. "He passed it to (Zydrunas) Ilgauskas twice, he passed it to Larry Hughes and he passed it to Marshall. If I'm the best player on the court, I've got to get a shot. That's not a criticism, that's a fact."

But consider this: If Marshall's shot had dropped, James would have finished with a triple-double and been praised for not forcing the action. His unselfishness would be viewed as his strength — not a flaw.

Some of the Pistons who spent the entire game focused on stopping James with double- and triple-teams are now on his side.

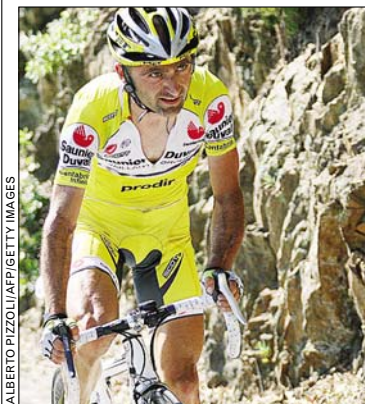

"They want him to be the man so bad and want him to shoot every single time, and that's just unfair," Chauncey Billups said. "The kid made a great, great play. If they would have made that shot, then they would have been talking about how wonderful the play was. I'm just glad they missed it."

A greater concern for Cleveland may be James' lack of assertiveness at times. He scored just four points in the first half of Game 1 and didn't drive as often as Brown would like.

It was only the second game this season James didn't get to the foul line. Brown, though, felt it wasn't all James' fault.

"There were times that we did attack the rim the right way, and they should have called a foul, but they didn't," he said. "That's how it goes." TOM WITHERS (AP)

Landis' Cross Focuses on Manager

Tour champion grilled on threat to reveal LeMond was abused

CYCLING | Floyd Landis wriggled through an uncomfortable cross-examination Tuesday, carefully answering questions about the color of his tie and the timing of the firing of the manager who threatened to reveal Greg LeMond's childhood sex abuse if he testified.

It was yet another salacious morning in the Tour de France champion's doping appeals hearing, which has veered wildly between boring, dense science and allegations of witness tampering and who knew what when.

Attorneys from the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency pursued questions relating to Thursday's revelations by LeMond in his testimony. On that day, LeMond testified he'd received a phone call the night before from Landis' manager, Will Geoghegan, who threatened to divulge the three-time Tour champion's secret.

USADA attorney Matthew Barnett asked Landis when he informed his attorneys of the call Geoghegan placed last Wednesday night, and why he or his legal team waited to fire Geoghegan until after LeMond revealed details of the call.

With his attorneys, Howard Jacobs and Maurice Suh, objecting frequently to Barnett's questions, Landis told his story in bits and pieces.

Landis testified that he told his attorneys about the call as soon as he arrived at the hearing room Thursday, though Geoghegan wasn't fired until after LeMond's testimony.

"In hindsight, I probably should have fired him immediately, but I needed someone to talk to," Landis said.

The entire episode has shifted the focus away from the science that presumably will decide this case. (AP)

Race Team Fined For Illegal Fuel

Dreyer & Reinbold's co-owner doesn't make excuses for mistake

AUTO RACING | Dennis Reinbold contends his race team made a mistake. Others might call it outright cheating.

Either way, Dreyer & Reinbold Racing is paying a price — a fine and a ruined engine — for using an illegal fuel blend during the first week of Indianapolis 500 practice.

IndyCar series president Brian Barnhart said Tuesday he couldn't determine whether the team intentionally added methanol to the fuel to increase speeds. So, he fined the team an undisclosed amount of money.

"It was a mistake, and we're moving on," team co-owner Reinbold said through team spokesman Klint Briney.

No Room for a Letdown

Invite to Sudamericana will leave United with little time to recover

UNITED | Just days after a second consecutive win appeared to lift D.C. United from the post Champions Cup hangover that was key to the its miserable MLS start, the club announced that it's heading back to the bar.

For the second time in three years D.C. will participate in the Copa Sudamericana, a South American competition that has been inviting top teams from North and Central America in recent years. Included thanks to its third-place finish in this spring's Champions Cup, United learned on Tuesday that it enters the round of 16 in early September against the very team that broke its heart in early April — Mexico's Chivas Guadalajara.

United coach Tom Soehn said he would have preferred a different opponent to start, but that his players all wanted another shot at their Champions Cup nemesis.

"When it was announced to the guys that we were in, the first thing they said was 'I hope we get a chance at Chivas,'" Soehn said. "We had a good enough team to

D.C. lost a close decider in Guadalajara, 2-1, on a shot goalkeeper Troy Perkins would save 99 times out of 100. Robbed of an opportunity to play for the continental title and a spot in the Club World Cup, United limped to an 0-3 league start. After Saturday's win in Toronto, which lifted D.C. to 2-3-1, Perkins acknowledged that the "emotional letdown" was a factor in slow start. "We're professionals," he said. "We should have been able to do better."

United will have the opportunity to show its resiliency and depth as its schedule becomes even more crowded. Already charged with negotiating the league, the impending U.S. Open Cup and this summer's inaugural SuperLiga tournament pitting U.S. and Mexican clubs, D.C. now will enter the Sudamericana on the eve of the MLS playoffs. It will not have the luxury of a hangover this time around.

"We had a learning experience, but now we understand how to deal with it," Soehn said. BRIAN STRAUS

Soccer team hopes to beat Liverpool after blowing lead in '05

CHAMPIONS LEAGUE | Two years after losing a 3-0 lead and the biggest prize in European club soccer, AC Milan gets a chance to set things straight.

The 2005 Champions League final loss in a penalty shootout to Liverpool still haunts the Rossoneri, and now they face the Reds again for the trophy.

Coach Carlo Ancelotti wants his team to forget that disaster and concentrate on what his players have achieved this season after the club's eight-point punishment in the Italian league for match-fixing.

"The game two years ago is Liverpool teammates celebrate after beating AC Milan for their 2005 title.

another story. It has nothing to do with this. This is a new adventure," he said Tuesday.

Milan led 3-0 at halftime in the 2005 final in Istanbul, Turkey, but then conceded three goals in six minutes and lost on penalties.

While the 2005 final began with the rare sight of a first-minute goal by Milan's veteran defender Paolo Maldini, this game is likely to start much more slowly, with neither side wanting to make the first mistake.

"We know that was a special game," Liverpool manager Rafa Benitez said Tuesday on the eve of a rematch final with Milan in Athens. "Our plan will be don't concede any goals and, for sure, don't concede in the first minute.

"If you said to me, 'Do you want to see that kind of game?,' I would need to see a doctor."

For Scott, Football Is Life

Ravens LB didn't have to come to camp, but that's not his style

RAVENS | No one would have blamed Bart Scott if he had stayed home this week instead of attending the Ravens' voluntary three-day camp.

After all, Scott last season established himself as one of the finest linebackers in the NFL. He became a starter for the first time, recorded a career-high 119 tackles and four sacks and made the Pro Bowl.

The guy deserves a vacation. But Scott was playing football Tuesday, working up a sweat with a squad that consisted primarily of free agents and rookies.

"I don't have a life. It's out of pure boredom," he said with a grin. "It's either this or stay at home and play PlayStation all day."

Ray Lewis, Chris McAlister, Ed Reed and a few of the Ravens' other stars might have been working out on their own. Maybe they were playing video games. They didn't have to be in camp and exercised that option.

But that's not how Scott operates.

"When we lost, I came back and lifted weights for two weeks because I didn't know what to do. I was so shocked. I still had a lot left in me," Scott recalled. "I don't want to feel that feeling again. I've learned what it feels like to lose. Now, I want to see what it feels like to win and take it all the way to the top." (AP)

Dallas to Host Super Bowl in 2011

NFL | The Cowboys' new stadium in Arlington, Texas, will host the 2011 Super Bowl, beating out bids by Indianapolis and Arizona.

NFL owners voted Tuesday for the North Texas group. The Cowboys' $1 billion stadium seats up to 100,000 and will open in 2009. It has about 27,000 more seats than the stadiums in the losing cities.

Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said the actual crowd ticketed at the game could reach 120,000, with fans being able to watch video screens at each end zone.

"Everyone has always told me,

'I wish we could get more fans in the Super Bowl. I wish we could do that,'" he said.

NFL owners also reviewed recommended standards for managing concussions during their one-day, spring meeting, and another topic included trimming times for the first two rounds of the draft.

CALL IT A COMEBACK: Fresh from the box-office disaster that was "Grindhouse," director Robert Rodriguez has signed on to helm a remake of the 1968 film "Barbarella," which starred Jane Fonda as a futuristic mercenary. Look for Rodriguez's version in 2008.

JUST THE TWO OF US: Blake Lewis and Jordin Sparks practice their totally sincere "We're happy with whoever wins" smiles.

'Idol' Thoughts

Weighing the pros and cons of this season's 'AI' finalists

VOTE! | "American Idol" finalists Jordin Sparks and Blake Lewis are attractive and talented and have millions of adoring fans. That's where their similarities end.

The two telegenic singers — the Beauty and the Beatboxer, respectively — will try to out-sing, out-groove and out-charm one another in this week's fairy tale finale. Who's gonna win? It's a tough call. Though many argue that Sparks is the clear front-runner, Lewis is full of surprises.

Sparks, the 17-year-old daughter of retired NFL player Phillippi Sparks, sits pretty in one corner. The bubbly teen with the killer voice from Glendale, Ariz., is poised beyond her years, yet her girl-next-door goofiness endears her to viewers of all ages. She was born to win "American Idol," her fans say.

"I'm very, very strong-willed. This is what I want to do," she told

'IDOL' CONSPIRACY?

Howard Stern's news crew has been alleging a fix is in place.

→ Sirius Satellite Radio kingpin Howard Stern participated in the "Vote for Sanjaya" movement. But when the talent-free cutie was cut from the show, theories abounded that "Idol" producers forced Sanjaya out — not the voters — because they were mad that the contest was being manipulated. The Howard 100 News team, led by reporter Steve Langford, have continued to report on alleged "Idol" fixes. A May 21 posting on HowardStern.com states "... following claims by multiple sources telling Howard 100 News that finalist Jordin Sparks has long been scheduled to win this year's 'American Idol,' word now comes from inside the show that panicked producers have, according to our source, allegedly decided to let the voters decide this week, in an effort to head off charges of fixing." (EXPRESS) reporters in a Friday teleconference. "It's what I've been wanting to do for so long, and I think that if people did vote for me, that I could represent it well if I actually won. It would be amazing."

Sparks' bold yet sweet personality has eclipsed some suspect song choices, like the depressingly old-fashioned "I Who Have Nothing,"

She performed that number twice this season — last week it was panned by Simon Cowell, whose face turned even gloomier when his favorite contender, Melinda Doolittle, went home.

If Sparks is this year's Miss Congeniality, Lewis, 25, of Bothell, Wash., wins awards for most creative and best dressed. The stylish beatboxer, who has been experimenting with hair color in recent weeks, has shown talent for choosing songs that play to his strengths and altering song arrangements to inject contemporary pizzazz.

He's had his ups and downs, but won much acclaim for his takes on Keane's "Somewhere Only We Know," which highlighted his lilt-ing voice, and "You Give Love a Bad Name," perhaps his greatest "Idol" hit. His decision to add hip-hop beats to the latter impressed Cowell and irked guest Jon Bon Jovi.

“She performs, she's good-looking, she got a fantastic personality ... I love Jordin Sparks”

BLAKE LEWIS, "IDOL" FINALIST

"I don't think I've really ever listened to the judges, I think, on this show," Lewis told reporters last week. "I kinda nod my head and smile and say thank you."

His fans argue: He's a risk-taker! He's cute! He's cool! But none of these qualities matters when Sparks is in the picture, says Rolling Stone executive editor Joe Levy.

"Jordin brings more to the table and she has all season," Levy told the Associated Press. "Blake is a limited singer and his presentation is limited as well. ... He hasn't shown himself to be versatile or as winning as Jordan. So, on talent alone, I would give it to Jordin."

The soulful singer/high school student "is just better on TV than Blake," he added. "And, in fact, probably better on TV than anyone else this season."

Her young age provides that edge needed to win over female voters. "For the teen girls, she's one of them. For the moms, she's everything they want their daughter or son to grow up to be," Levy said.

Even Lewis appears to be on Team Jordin. "She's 17 and she's already a woman," he gushed. "She performs, she's good-looking, she's got a fantastic personality and it reads really well on camera. And so I love Jordin Sparks. ... Regardless of the finale, I think she already won it in my mind." ERIN CARLSON (AP)

Sam Endicott and the Bravery learn how to hold a guitar on "The Sun and the Moon."

Nouveau New Wave

From those who've learned to rock, the Bravery salutes you

MUSIC | Stripped of the heavy, synth-driven sound of its debut, the Bravery injects a little more rock and a few bright moments into its sophomore effort, "The Sun and the Moon" (Island).

Favoring dominant yet simple bass lines and more aggressive lead work on guitar, the disc is still drenched with new wave, and the keyboards remain vital.

Vocalist Sam Endicott stretches out on refreshing acoustic tracks like "Tragedy Bound" and "The Ocean" — but seems cliché with lyrics such as "The ocean rolls us away." Similarly, disc opener "Believe" sports a catchy bass riff, but seems uninspired with the chorus, "So give me something to believe, 'cause I'm living just to breathe."

The band hits a few high notes with infectious keyboard lines on the trippy "Fist Full of Sand" and the poppy "Angelina," as well as the love-lost rocker "Split Me Wide Open" and a soaring "Time Won't Let Me Go."

"Bad Sun" is a guilty pleasure with its whistling — yes, whistling — hook line, but the Bravery fails to strike the right chord of irony and get a little too cute with "Every Word From Your Mouth Is a Knife in My Ear." And "This Is Not the End" sounds like Franz Ferdinand, but the song has plenty of kinetic energy and start-and-stop guitar jangle — enough to tell you right away whether you'll love or hate this band.

"The Sun and the Moon" is a bit more adventurous for the Bravery, so don't let the few sprinkles of repetition on a few tracks spoil the enjoyable leaps it manages to take here and there.

Frustrated with Type 2 Diabetes?

Are you taking metformin / glucophage, exercising and eating healthy?

If you are doing everything right to control your diabetes . . . And your blood sugar level is still too high, we may have an option for you.

Local physicians are conducting a research study of an investigational medication for Type 2 Diabetes. If you qualify, you will receive all study-related care and medication at no cost. For information, please call Accelovance:

HOW TO USE

Apartments.com Directory

A. Location

You'll see that the directory listings in this issue are geographically arranged by state, county and city to make your apartment search easy. There are also an abundance of apartment communities on our display pages that increase your choices in the areas that you are considering.

B. Price

Each listing contains the most up-to-date information about the apartment's starting rental rates, its phone number and apartments.com Web #

C. Web ID

Log onto www.washingtonpost.com/apartments, select search by Web # and enter the community Web # number into the search box. There you will find photos, maps, directions, school information, pet policies, features, amenities and much more. There's no better source of the detailed information you need to find the perfect new home than apartments.com

Winners & Losers

'Idol' and 'Lost' go into summer hiatus after grand finales

IDLE | The network television season wraps up its final night of sweeps in fitting fashion, forcing viewers to choose between the season finale of television's most popular showcase and its most compelling drama.

"American Idol" (8 p.m., Fox) ends its long process of elimination with a two-hour special. Perhaps the only real suspense here is how "Idol" will attract and keep viewers for the first 100 minutes or so, when everybody knows that the decision between Blake and Jordin will be announced during the last 10 minutes.

But if last year's deliciously cheesy finale was any guide, there should be some odd moments to savor. And at least one of them will feature Sanjaya.

"Lost" (9 p.m., ABC) also concludes with an extended two-hour helping. "Lost" seasons have ended with puzzling new developments that lead to a summer of head-scratching among the faithful.

When you come to think of it, a single episode of "Lost" can be more involving and mysterious than a whole season of some dramatic series. And that's why it has emerged as one of the best dramas of this or any TV season. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

A REPEAT OF A RERUN

Neither history nor culture unfolds in neat, definable decades, but that doesn't stop people from trying to describe them as such. SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE IN THE '90S: POP CULTURE NATION (8 p.m., NBC) tries and fails to look at that decade as a coherent whole.

THE 'WHICH BLAIR?' PROJECT

THE BLAIR DECADE (9 p.m., PBS) offers a profile of departing British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who leaves office on June 27, roughly 10 years after the Labor party's landslide victory.

College Rejects

Recycling

The mounds of trash on campus grounds aren't filled with junk

With 1,700 students, Davidson College may be small. But you'd never know it when you see the stuff students leave behind at the end of year.

In a large room at a fraternity house, stacks of clothing, furniture, lamps and electronics were already piling up days ahead of graduation on May 20. Mixed in were odds and ends that could only wind up together in a college trash pile: a pair of giant Homer Simpson slippers; a collection of Pokemon cards; a batch of fashion disaster dresses one can only hope were costumes from a campus theme party called the Five Dollar Prom.

College students have more possessions than ever, and in the frenzy of finals, commencement and last-gasp partying before the end of the school year, little time is left for an orderly move. Purging is often easier than shipping or storing.

"As you're trying to stuff your stuff into the car, you realize what you really need," said freshman Elizabeth Krebs.

But recently, much of the flotsam and jetsam of Davidson's spring has at least avoided the Dumpster. Last year, students collected enough goods to fill the frat house about 10 times over — twice as much as the year before — and turned the material over to local charities.

Davidson isn't the only college trying to put its student left-behinds to better use. On Saturday, up to 10,000 people are expected to descend on Penn State's Beaver Stadium to pick their way through 62 tons of student detritus at the annual "Trash to Treasure" sale, which has raised more than $200,000 for the United Way.

Wake Forest "could basically open our own clothing store" with what it collects from students, said Donna McGalliard, the school's director of residence life and housing. "Very well-known brands. Banana Republic. Old Navy. Chaps."

THROWAWAY STYLE: Davidson College graduate Will Winter, right, carries a bag of clothes after sorting them on Sunday.

“There are 4,000 schools in this country, and they're all living like there's no tomorrow.”

ED NEWMAN, OHIO UNIVERSITY

Many still have price tags. Others "are a little worn or wrinkled, but they didn't seem to have stains or anything on them," she said.

Ed Newman, who oversees the recycling and reuse programs at Ohio University, calls the spring move-out "a study in conspicuous consumption."

"There are 85 schools in Ohio and 4,000 in this country, and they're all living like there's no tomorrow," he said. Though proud of the efforts, he is also troubled by how much still is wasted. About 80 percent of OU's trash could be recycled or reused.

"It's more appalling than anything else," he said.

Boragine, who started a resale program at the University of Richmond when she was teaching there, said she can tell the difference between a school with a $20,000 price tag and a $40,000 one just by looking at what gets left behind.

"Instead of the dollar-store scissors, you'd probably find the $7 ergonomically correct scissors," she said.

Eventually, the cartloads of sweatshirts and acres of carpet blur together, and it's the more colorful left-behind items that stick out. A six-foot boa constrictor got left in a drawer at the University of Florida a while back; a three-foot inflatable Jesus turned up at Bates College. This year's haul at Colgate University in New York includes a gross of chopsticks, a walking cast and a disco ball.

Some find anthropological significance in the mixture of the odd and humdrum.

A typical catch might include "hula hoops, dishes, a can opener, a couple of condoms and notebook paper," said Kim Yarbray, environmental sustainability coordinator at Guilford College in North Carolina.

"Their whole life is right there," she said. "You can just see it in the things they choose to discard."

Life Outside the Lines

Technology

Homeowners in the West are generating power for themselves

Before power lines, homesteaders had no choice. They lit their lanterns, stoked their fires and packed away winter ice against sizzling summers.

The 250 homeowners in the Three Rivers community near Lake Billy Chinook, Ore., are far from homesteading or camping out. But they are among a growing number of Americans who shun power lines, choosing instead to live "off the grid," without commercial power.

Three Rivers residents get most of their power from dark solar panels, which easily handle their computers, lights, large-screen televisions, microwave ovens, refrigerator-freezers and more.

"Ninety percent of the people here, if [outside] power were offered to them, they'd turn it down," said Gary Sweet, a semi-retired insurance agent who moved to the high desert community in Central Oregon a couple of years ago.

An elevated solar panel generates plenty of power for a home in the Three Rivers Recreational Area in Lake Billy Chinook, Ore.

The number of people going off the grid increases by about a third each year, said Richard Perez, who publishes Home Power magazine.

While much of the growth is in California, off-the-grid living is also growing in Texas, New Jersey and Wisconsin.

The option is popular in the West because people are moving into remote areas beyond the reach of commercial power.

Ten years ago, the power company near Three Rivers requested $300,000 to extend its power lines to nearby properties. Residents in the decidedly upscale community could have easily found the funds, but they've decided to stay off the grid.

"With power lines come streetlights, and there go your stars at night," said Gary Sweet. "And there are no power outages here."

Off-the-grid residents have a guaranteed power supply at a time when the emphasis on "clean" energy is on the rise. Solar energy uses no resources to speak of, emits no pollution and is immune to energy price hikes.

Still, living off-line isn't cheap. High demand for solar panels and improved technology has kept the price up, and homeowners in Three Rivers say an advanced solar energy system can cost $25,000 for all the equipment.

"Ninety percent of the people here, if power were offered to them, they'd turn it down."

GARY SWEET, LAKE BILLY CHINOOK

Richard Perez headed for the remote solitude of southernmost Oregon's Siskiyou Mountains in 1970 and was told it would cost $270,000 — then — to extend commercial power to his site.

"We built with a handsaw and it was seven years before we had electricity, 10 before we had appreciable solar power in here," said Perez.

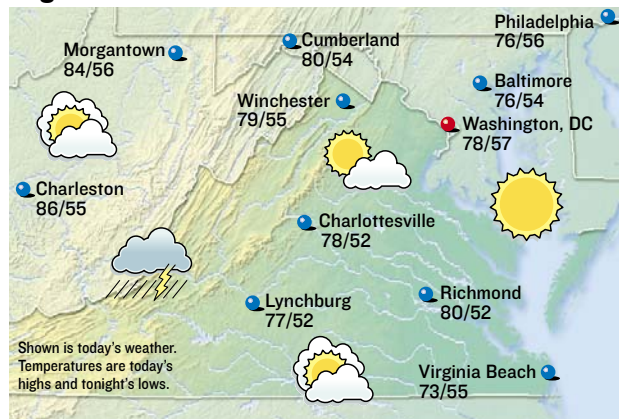

"We started with a generator and gradually added solar. We rarely use the generator except during extended cloudy periods," said Perez. "I'd rather eat a bug than burn gas."

Red Carpet Ready

Getting ready for major events takes a team of beauty pros

An award-winning performance on the red carpet is an ensemble effort.

There's the stylist who comes up with the vision of the outfit; the designer who creates it; designers for the multiple accessories; the hair stylist; the makeup artist; and let us not forget the celebrity who has to put all this on and add some serious star wattage.

Here are some of the insiders honored by celebrity bible US Weekly at its recent Hot Hollywood event. You won't see their names in the pages of the magazine too often, but you will see their work.

Designers Georgina Chapman and Keren Craig launched Marche-sa in 2004 in London as an evening-gear brand. Marchesa has become a red carpet staple, especially for Jennifer Lopez, who wore Marchesa gowns to this year's Oscars and Golden Globes and earlier this month in New York at the Met's Costume Institute Gala. (It was Lopez who was named the magazine's Style Icon of the Year.)

Because their celebrity clients often can't make a move without being photographed, Craig and Chapman take some special precautions with their dresses. They test a dress's color and transparency under camera flashes and check to see how wrinkled a gown will appear after a limo ride.

Mark Townsend, who is the "celebrity stylist" for the Matrix hair care brand, sees those same flashes and bright lights as his friend.

"You want shiny. You want to reflect the lights," he said. His go-to product for that is a heat-sensitive hair mist infused with gold flecks. For makeup artist Paul Starr, the challenge is to keep up with images the public is used to seeing. One of his tricks is adding individual false eyelashes. "You want them to look like themselves, but almost untouchable and perfected — but not obviously so," Starr said. "I had a conversation with Goldie Hawn a few years ago. She said when she won her Oscar [in 1970], she'd buy a dress, put the dress on, take her curlers out and do her own makeup. Those days are over."

Sasha Charnin Morrison, fashion director at US Weekly, said celebrity fashion has been a part of pop culture since the heyday of the big Hollywood studios. The difference is that now the whole package is merchandised and sold to the public.

"When a celebrity goes on the red carpet, it's the best billboard a designer could hope for," Morrison said. (1) Jessica Alba, here at a Chanel show, was last year's Style Icon of the Year and attended this year's party. (2) Jennifer Lopez, shown here at the Met Costume Gala, took the top prize for 2007. (3) Carmen Electra and her tiny dress were one of the Hot 7 in '07. (4) Jennifer Love Hewitt, attending the Museum of Television and Radio Gala, is a previous winner of the puzzling Hottest Body Style award.

Movies

Dressing the Part

You might think that Johnny Depp's character in the "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies — the latest is out on Friday — would have had other things to worry about, but a lot of thought went into his wardrobe. Some tidbits from costume designer Penny Rose and props master Kris Peck: The lace tied around Sparrow's wrist was a suggestion from Depp, who wanted a few points of interest. "This is an old piece of lace, and in a conversation with Johnny, we decided that it was a trophy piece from a young lady," Rose said. The green ring Sparrow wears is one that Depp bought for himself in 1989. (AP)

Beauty

A Trip to the East

For the woman of mystery. For the woman of complexity. For the woman who has a either a ton of money or a high-limit Visa. For this woman, there is Jean Patou's new SIRA DES INDES ($158, Saks Fifth Avenue). The best thing about it is that the perfume manages to be both sultry and musky, while still summer-appropriate. There are hits of incense and cedarwood, but it's cut through with tropical flowers and fruit, so you don't feel weighed down. We really liked the nice balance of heavy and light; any woman who prefers winter-style scents would love a squirt of this. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Live Online

Saving Lincoln?

Washington Post staff writer DAVID BROWN was online Tuesday and discussed whether Abraham Lincoln might have lived longer with modern medicine to treat him.

Does anyone really know exactly what damage had been done to Lincoln's brain?

No one knew for sure, as he was unconscious. But neuroanatomy is very well understood, so it is possible to say with some assurance what general modalities and functions were likely damaged by the bullet.

The report stated that the bullet stopped before it reached the frontal lobe. What would have happened had it been a modern bullet?

It would have gone through the frontal lobes and out the frontal bone, much like the bullet that killed JFK. He lost a significant amount of brain matter through the exit wound. The cavitary shock wave of high-velocity bullets is apparently also much greater than with one like Booth's.

If Lincoln had survived his injuries, would he have eventually been able to resume his responsibilities as president?

At the time of Lincoln's death (and for nearly a century after), there was no constitutional provision to provide transfer of presidential power to the vice president while the president was still alive.

Isaac Asimov wrote William Henry Harrison might have survived his pneumonia, but no one could have survived the constant attention of a team of doctors of the period. Is this reasonable?

The same has been said of George Washington's treatment for a tonsillar abscess. Many observers believe he was essentially bled to death therapeutically.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be privy to something that is rare — and startling. How you use the information you receive is most important.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your perceptions may seem rather faulty as the day opens, so you'll want to sit back and take stock of things. Later, you're back on track.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Take your time. Don't let those around you rush you into making any decisions you'll later regret. Use care — but don't be timid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can afford to be a little more relaxed and laid-back during much of the day. Don't worry — you'll know when you have to buckle down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll have a time of it trying to control those around you with less experience. There's a tendency to run wild.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may receive a proposition from someone that you must take in just the right way — and that can pay off in a manner you did not expect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You'll be asking, "What's in it for me?" on more than one occasion. Indeed, when your turn comes, you'll have no doubt what's coming your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against overspending. Your financial resources must be watched over at this time with more care than usual. The evening reveals a secret.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'll have more options to choose from than you expected — but the test will be making the right choice at exactly the right time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) While intending to do something big, you can possibly accomplish one or two things that are small but memorable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may feel as though your efforts are being overshadowed by those of another — but you've already made your mark.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your tolerance of those who do not yet know the rules will prove beneficial to you and those around you. Avoid knee-jerk reactions.

Why Nobody's at the Game

THERE ARE TWO reasons why attendance has dropped at Nationals games ("Nats Fans Are Few, Far Between," May 22). First, the D.C. area is primarily a transient area, so area residents grew up cheering for other teams. The second is that the team is terrible. The only way you're going to get fans of other teams to show up at games is if favorites play the Nats or if the Nats become good. I don't think the latter will happen in the near future. So, don't look for a large fan base for the Nationals anytime soon. It will take many years, and, given the transient nature of this town, I doubt it's even possible.

BABIES

They Found a Two-for-One Coupon in the Newspaper

DENNIS QUAID and his wife, KIMBERLY, are expecting twins later this year by a surrogate mother. The 53-year-old actor and his wife are the biological parents, Quaid publicist Lisa Kasteler said Monday. The couple married in July 2004. Quaid has a teenage son from his marriage to Meg Ryan. Quaid is now filming "The Express," Kasteler said. (AP)

ABSURD INJURIES

How Very Fitting

PAULA ABDUL broke her nose last weekend — just days before the season finale of "American Idol" — when she fell while trying to avoid stepping on her Chihuahua. She was recovering from the mishap and planned to appear on the Tuesday night's and Wednesday night's shows, her publicist said. (AP)

UNEMPLOYMENT

The Nanny Work Force Steels Itself For Tough Times Ahead

ANGELINA JOLIE says she plans to take a year off from filmmaking to spend more time with her partner, Brad Pitt, and their children. "We're getting work out of the way at the moment," said the 31-year-old actress, who has been shooting the thriller "Wanted" in Prague, Czech Republic. After that, she said, "I take two months off, then I work for two months. Then I take a year off." Jolie and Pitt, 43, have four children:

5-year-old Maddox, who was adopted from Cambodia; Pax Thien, 3, from Vietnam; 2-year-old Zahara, from Ethiopia; and daughter Shiloh, who was born to the couple May 27, 2006. (AP)

Woman Probably Fired for Not Knowing Her Celebrities

Country music singer and recovering alcoholic KEITH URBAN knew he was back in Australia when a Qantas flight attendant welcomed him with a bottle of wine. He recently completed a stint in rehab for alcohol abuse. In a statement, Qantas said the gaffe was a routine customer relations gesture "by a staff member who genuinely did not realize who the passenger was." South Australia is home to some of the country's most productive wine regions. (AP)

Do Your Share for Cleaner Air

Air quality is a major concern in the Washington Metropolitan region, particularly during ozone season, which runs from May to the end of September. Metro and Clean Air Partners, a non-profit, public-private partnership, encourage you to learn more about how you can make a difference.

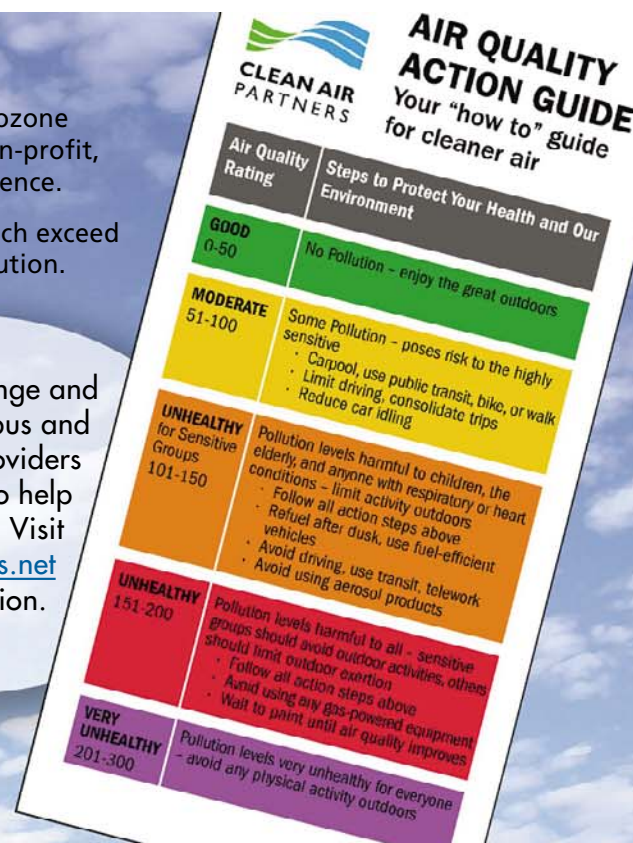

During ozone season, there are a greater number of Code Orange and Code Red days, which exceed the Environmental Protection Agency's standards for ground-level ozone and particle pollution.

Code Orange days affect sensitive groups including children, older adults and people with respiratory or heart conditions. Code Red days indicate a level of poor air quality that is unhealthy for everyone. For both air quality ratings, you are more at risk to air pollution and should take extra precautions to protect your health.

Four ways you can help:

1. Limit driving. Take public transit, carpool or vanpool.
2. Sign up to receive Clean Air Partners' air quality forecast alert at cleanairpartners.net.
3. Follow the Air Quality Action Guide's steps to protect your health and the environment.
4. Avoid using aerosol products and gas-powered lawn care equipment.

On Code Orange and Red Days, Metrobus and other local bus providers offer free rides to help reduce pollution. Visit cleanairpartners.net for more information.

SAFETY TIP

Take care when using Metrobus. Never run to catch a bus after it has left a designated bus stop, and don't approach a bus that is already in motion.

SmarTrip® Now Accepted on Regional Bus Systems

SmarTrip® cards are now accepted for more than just Metrobus and Metrorail fares and Metro parking fees. Many regional transit providers have begun to accept SmarTrip® cards, and more are scheduled to add the convenient payment form this summer.

RideOn in Montgomery County began accepting SmarTrip® at the end of April, and DASH riders in Alexandria have been able to pay with SmarTrip® since February. In May, Fairfax County Connector buses, CUE (City of Fairfax) and Loudoun County Commuter Bus will install fareboxes that accept SmarTrip®. PRTC OmniRide and ART-Arlington Transit are scheduled to follow this summer.

Customers can purchase SmarTrip® cards online at MetroOpensDoors.com or in person at Metro sales offices, retail outlets, commuter stores or from vending machines at Metrorail stations that have parking facilities. For more information, visit our Web site and click on "SmarTrip®" under Quick Links at the top of the page.
